

TURNAROUND:ARTS

creating success in schools

WHITE HOUSE COMMITTEE SELECTS NOEL COMMUNITY ARTS SCHOOL FOR PRESTIGIOUS ARTS INITIATIVE TO HELP TURN AROUND LOW-PERFORMING SCHOOLS

Award-winning actress Alfre Woodard to work in school as part of new program

Washington, DC, Monday April 23, 2012 (Embargoed 8:30 a.m. EST)—Today the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities announced that Noel Community Arts School in Denver, Colorado has been selected to participate in a new arts education initiative to help turn around low-performing schools, developed in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Education and the White House Domestic Policy Council. The Turnaround Arts initiative is a new public-private partnership designed to narrow the achievement gap and improve student engagement through the arts. Noel Community Arts School was chosen to be one of eight schools featured in the program through a highly competitive national selection process, and will receive intensive arts education resources, expertise and the involvement of high-profile President's Committee artists over the course of two years to support their educational reform effort.

The President's Committee is delighted to have the students of Noel Community Arts School, and their inspirational principal, Stacy Miller, participating in Turnaround Arts, said PCAH Vice-Chair Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D. We are impressed with the outstanding commitment of Ms. Miller and her team at Noel Community Arts, and we look forward to helping them harness the power of the arts as they transform their school into a creative, engaging and high-performing learning environment.

Turnaround Arts will work in eight elementary and middle turnaround schools across the country—public schools in the lowest-achieving five percent of their state that are receiving School Improvement Grants through the U.S. Department of Education. An educational evaluation study will measure the impact and effectiveness of using rigorous and integrated arts education together with other educational reform efforts in high-poverty, low-performing schools.

Arts education is such a wonderful, vital enabler for our kids—tapping their innate abilities, broadening their horizons and building their capabilities, said Tom Boasberg, Superintendent of Denver Public Schools. That is why we are so thrilled and grateful that Noel Community Arts School has been selected for this very innovative program.

Three studies released this month by the Council on Foreign Relations, the Department of Education and the National Endowment for the Arts emphasized the importance of access to arts education, citing better grades, increased creativity, higher rates of college enrollment and graduation as well as higher aspirations and civic engagement. Research shows that when students participate in the arts they are four times more likely to be recognized for academic achievement, have higher GPAs and SAT scores and show significantly higher levels of mathematics proficiency by grade 12. They are also more likely to be engaged and cooperative with teachers and peers and are more self-confident and better able to express their ideas. These benefits are particularly pronounced in high-poverty, low-performing schools.

"We are so honored to be one of eight schools in the nation selected for this program," said Stacy Miller, Principal, Noel Community Arts School. "The Turnaround Arts program will be integral in driving the vision and mission of our school, offering the community and students an excellent school that aligns rigor and high academic achievement with creative thinking and individual expression through the arts."

As part of the program, the President's Committee and its partners will provide training and resources to Noel Community Arts and the other participating schools, including an Aspen Institute summer leadership program, in-school professional development, partnerships with community arts education and cultural organizations, art supplies and musical instruments and community engagement events. Presidentially-appointed artists on the Committee, Chuck Close, Sarah Jessica Parker, Kerry Washington, Forest Whitaker, Yo-Yo Ma, Damian Woetzel and Alfre Woodard, will adopt one of the selected schools for the length of the program, working with the schools and communities and highlighting their successes.

"All children deserve access to high quality arts education which transforms lives and creates engaging places to learn," said Alfre Woodard, Actress and PCAH member. "I am looking forward to working with Noel Community Arts School over the next two years to create those opportunities for their students."

The partners in Turnaround Arts include the National Endowment for the Arts, the Ford Foundation, the Herb Alpert Foundation, Crayola, NAMM Foundation, the Aspen Institute and Booz Allen Hamilton. Intel and SKDKnickerbocker are providing additional support and resources. Turnaround Arts is being run and managed by the Arts Education Partnership, a national coalition administered by the Council of Chief State School Officers, the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies, the National Endowment for the Arts and the U.S. Department of Education.

Participating schools were competitively selected from nominations by state and municipal authorities. In addition to being recipients of a School Improvement Grant, criteria for selection included demonstrated need and opportunity, strong school leadership with district support and a commitment to arts education. Turnaround Arts schools represent elementary and middle schools from across the country and encompass a diversity of student demographics and urban and rural settings. They are:

- (1) Batiste Cultural Arts Academy at Live Oak School in New Orleans, LA (PK–8)
- (2) Findley Elementary School in Des Moines, IA (PK–5)
- (3) Lame Deer Jr. High School in Lame Deer, MT (7,8)
- (4) Noel Community Arts School in Denver, CO (6,7)
- (5) Orchard Gardens K-8 School in Boston, MA (K–8)
- (6) Savoy Elementary School in Washington, DC (PK–5)
- (7) Martin Luther King, Jr. School in Portland, OR (K–8)
- (8) Roosevelt School in Bridgeport, CT (K–8)

More information about the TAI and profiles of selected schools can be found here:

<http://turnaroundarts.pcah.gov> (no www.)

More information about the PCAH can be found at www.pcah.gov

For more information or to schedule interviews, please contact Jody Arlington jodyarlington@mac.com, 202.316.4316 or Rachel Racusen at RRacusen@skdknick.com, 202.464.6616.

About the President's Committee on The Arts and The Humanities

Created in 1982 under President Reagan, the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities (PCAH) is an advisory committee to the White House on cultural issues. The PCAH works directly with the three primary cultural agencies- National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Institute of Museum and Library Services- as well as other federal partners and the private sector, to address policy questions in the arts and humanities, to initiate and support key programs in those disciplines and to recognize excellence in the field. Its core areas of focus are education, cultural exchange, and creative economy. Under the leadership of the First Lady and Honorary Chairman, and through the efforts of its federal and private members, the President's Committee has compiled an impressive legacy over its tenure, conducting major research and policy analysis, and catalyzing important federal cultural programs, both domestic and international.